What's bigger than a school bus and has teeth up to 12 inches long? It is Dinosaur Sue! Sue is a Tyrannosaurus rex, or T. rex. She is on display at the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago.

This colossal dinosaur skeleton is named after Sue Hendrickson, the scientist who discovered it. It stands 13 feet high at the hips. The scull alone is more than five feet long and weighs about 600 pounds!

In August 1990 Hendrickson was searching for dinosaur bones on the Cheyenne River Indian Reservation. The reservation is in South Dakota. It is in an area of high mountains and rugged cliffs known as the Badlands.

⁴One day Hendrickson spotted some large bones sticking out of one of the cliffs. She knew by their size that the bones belonged to a T. rex. Hendrickson's discovery was the biggest and most complete dinosaur skeleton ever unearthed. Other T. rex skeletons had been found buried in the ground nearby, but they were always missing many of their bones. Hendrickson's new discovery was missing only a few bones.

A problem soon arose, however. A judge has to settle a dispute over the rights to the T. rex. The argument began when Maurice Williams, a member of the Cheyenne River Sioux tribe, said that he owned the skeleton. Williams insisted that it was his because it was found on his land. The judge agreed with Williams. The Field Museum finally paid more than eight million dollars for the bones.

⁶It was worth the price. Workers carefully took Sue's bones out of the ground and cleaned and prepared them. The bones were then connected like a huge puzzle. It took two years to assemble them. Now Sue stands on a base of rocks in the museum.

Experts have learned much about Sue's life. They think that the dinosaur weighed around 14,000 pounds. Scientists could also tell that Sue had been in many fights. Some of the big T. rex's bones were broken, and part of another dinosaur's tooth was found in one of Sue's ribs.

Hendrickson was at the opening day of the museum's dinosaur show, along with a crowd of curious people.

"Imagine running into a live animal of that size!" one visitor exclaimed.

"I want to touch the bones," said a 10-year-old.

Sue's bones are too delicate to handle. So the museum made plaster copies that visitors can touch. Children enjoy them very much. The museum also shows a movie telling how Sue's bones were prepared and put together.
