TASK 1. READING (10 points: 1 answer = 1 point)

Put the following paragraphs in the correct order to recreate the text. Transfer your answers into the answer sheet (1-10).

Love from Paddington

By Michael Bond

- A. “I’ve filled your suitcase with jars of marmalade for the journey,” continued his aunt. “And I have paid one of the crew to make sure you never run short of drinking water.” While she was talking she tied a large label round her nephew’s neck. “I’ve knotted the string twice over,” she said, “so it shouldn’t come apart.”

- B. There was nothing unusual in that, for it was a regular crossing carrying as many passengers as it could take, along with a full crew to look after their every need during the voyage.

- C. She only just managed to avoid falling into the harbour and by the time she had righted herself a wall of darkness separated her from the lifeboat.

WHEN they came out of the buffet Mr. Brown had already found a taxi and he waved them across.

The driver looked hard at Paddington and then at the inside of his nice, clean taxi. "Bears is extra," he said gruffly. "Sticky bears is twice as much again."

"He can't help being sticky, driver," said Mr. Brown. "He 11. _____ a nasty accident."

The Browns trooped obediently into the back of the taxi. Mr. and Mrs. Brown and Judy sat in the back, while Paddington stood on a tip-up seat behind the driver so that he could see out of the window.

The sun 12. _____ as they drove out of the station. Everything seemed bright and cheerful. There were people and cars and big, red buses everywhere – it wasn't a bit like Darkest Peru.

Paddington kept one eye out of the window in case he missed anything. With his other eye he 13. _____ examined Mr. and Mrs. Brown and Judy. Mr. Brown was fat and jolly, with a big moustache and glasses, while Mrs. Brown, who was also rather plump, looked like a larger 14. _____ of Judy.

Paddington had just decided he was going to like staying with the Browns when the glass window behind the driver shot back and a gruff voice said, "Where did you say you wanted to go?"

Mr. Brown leaned forward. "Number thirty-two, Windsor Gardens."

The driver 15. _____ his ear with one hand. "Can't 'ear you," he shouted.

Paddington tapped him on the shoulder. "Number thirty-two, Windsor Gardens," he repeated.

Love from Paddington

By Michael Bond

- A. “I expect this will come as a great surprise to you, but not only have I arrived in England, but I have an address!
- B. “Jonathan is sending this note by something called Air Mail, so you will get it as soon as possible. I will write again tomorrow because I have another big surprise for you. Love from PADDINGTON.”
- C. “Luckily, I have been taken in for the next day or two by a nice family called the Browns, but I’m hoping it will be much longer than that because I am very happy here.
- D. DEAR Aunt Lucy, She began, before pausing for a moment as the next word seemed to have been crossed out for some reason.
- E. “In fact, it is Judy who is typing this letter because she noticed straight away that my spelling isn’t very good. Also, using Mr. Brown’s computer isn’t easy with paws as I can’t help touching several keys at the same time.
- F. I have my own bed, so I am on my best behaviour, which isn’t easy because I have already flooded their bathroom by mistake and a lot of the water went through their downstairs ceiling.
- G. “I’m staying at number 32 Windsor Gardens and it isn’t at all like the Home for Retired Bears. You may not believe this, but it’s very near the Portobello Road, which you have often talked about when you suggested I might like living in London.
- H. This is an example of what happens when I try to type the letter ‘i’ uhiyg...!”

“A bear? On Paddington station?” Mrs. Brown looked at her husband in amazement. “Don’t be silly, Henry. There can’t be!”

Mr. Brown adjusted his glasses. “But there is,” he insisted. “I distinctly saw it. Over there – near the bicycle rack.”

“There you are,” he announced triumphantly, pointing towards a dark corner, “I told you so!”

Mrs. Brown followed the 13. _____ of his arm and dimly made out a small, furry object in the shadows. It seemed to be sitting on some kind of suitcase and around its neck there was a label with some writing on it.

Mrs. Brown clutched at her husband. “Why, Henry,” she exclaimed. “I believe you were right after all. It is a bear!”

She peered at it more closely. It seemed a very strange kind of bear. It was brown in colour, a rather dirty brown, and it 14. _____ a most odd looking hat, with a wide brim, just as Mr. Brown had said. From beneath the brim two large, round eyes stared back at her.

Seeing that something was expected of it the bear stood up and 15. _____ raised its hat, revealing two black ears. “Good afternoon,” it said, in a small, clear voice.

Put the following paragraphs in the correct order to recreate the text. Transfer your answers into the answer sheet (1- 10).

Please, Look After This Bear

By Michael Bond

- A. Bending down, the bear unlocked the suitcase with a small key, which it also had round its neck, and brought out an almost empty glass jar. “I ate marmalade,” he said, rather proudly. “Bears like marmalade. And I lived in a lifeboat.”
- B. THE Browns came up to the bear. The bear looked at them inquiringly. “Can I help you?”
- C. The bear nodded. “Aunt Lucy always said she wanted me to emigrate when I was old enough. That’s why she taught me to speak English.” “But whatever did you do for food?” asked Mr. Brown. “You must be starving.”
- D. Mr. Brown looked rather embarrassed. “Well... no. Er... as a matter of fact, we were wondering if we could help you.” Mrs. Brown bent down. “You’re a very small bear,” she said.
- E. He bent down. “Would you like to come and stay with us?” he asked. “That is,” he added, hastily, not wishing to offend the bear, “if you’ve nothing else planned.”

- F. “A stowaway?” Mr. Brown lowered his voice and looked anxiously over his shoulder. He almost expected to see a policeman standing behind him. “Yes,” said the bear. “I emigrated, you know.” A sad expression came into its eyes. “I used to live with my Aunt Lucy in Peru, but she had to go into a home for retired bears.” “You don’t mean to say you’ve come all the way from South America by yourself?” exclaimed Mrs. Brown.
- G. She turned appealingly to her husband. “Oh, Henry, what shall we do? We can’t just leave him here. London’s such a big place. Can’t he come and stay with us for a few days?”
- H. “But what are you going to do now?” said Mr. Brown. “You can’t just sit on Paddington station waiting for something to happen.”
- I. The bear puffed out its chest. “I’m a very rare sort of bear,” he replied importantly. “There aren’t many of us left where I come from.” “And where is that?” asked Mrs. Brown. The bear looked round carefully before replying. “Darkest Peru. I’m not really supposed to be here at all. I’m a stowaway!”
- J. “Oh, I shall be all right... I expect.” The bear bent down to do up its case again. As he did so Mrs. Brown caught a glimpse of the writing on the label. It said, simply, PLEASE LOOK AFTER THIS BEAR.THANK YOU.

“WELL,” Said Mr. Brown. “if you are coming home with us you’d better know our names. This is Mrs. Brown and I’m Mr. Brown.”

The bear raised its hat politely – twice. “I 11. not _____ really a name,” he said. “Only a Peruvian one which no one can understand.”

“Then we’d better give you an English one,” said Mrs. Brown. “It’ll make things much 12. _____.” She looked round the station for inspiration. “It ought to be something special,” she said 13. _____. As she spoke an engine standing in one of the platforms gave a loud wail and a train began to move. “I know what!” she exclaimed. “We found you on Paddington station so we’ll call you Paddington!”

“Paddington!” The bear repeated it several times to make sure. “It seems a very long name.”

“Quite distinguished,” said Mr. Brown. “Yes, I like Paddington as a name. Paddington it shall be.”

Mrs. Brown stood up. “Good. Now, Paddington, I have to meet our little daughter, Judy, off the train. She 14. _____ home from school. I’m sure you must be thirsty after your long journey, so you go along to the buffet with Mr. Brown and he’ll buy you a nice cup of tea.”

Paddington licked his lips. “I’m very thirsty,” he said. “Sea water 15. _____ you thirsty.” He picked up his suitcase, pulled his hat down firmly over his head, and waved a paw politely in the direction of the buffet. “After you, Mr Brown.”
