Open Voices is a community choir based in the town of Kingston, in Ontario, Canada. It was founded last year by a man called Andy Rush, an accomplished musician with a 16-year (1) record as a choir director.

Andy began by researching the way other community choirs were (2), before deciding on the (3) he wished to use for his own choir. He then advertised for people to come and try out the choir. There were no auditions and a (4) in music was not necessary.

The purpose of the trial session was simply to give people the opportunity to sing in a choir and get a (5) for the experience before making any (6) to it. In order to (7) the barriers that can prevent people from joining groups like this, he provided transportation, childcare, and subsidised membership fees for those who needed them. His goal was to make Open Voices inclusive and welcoming, and to (8) people from a variety of musical, cultural and social environments.

Andy expected 50 or 60 responses to his advertisement. In the event, 279 people (9) an interest in joining the choir. In order to (10) everyone, the choir had to be (11) into two groups, each one rehearsing on a different day. Open Voices has now held several (12) successful concerts and has many more planned for the future.

You are going to read an article about a wildlife cameraman called Doug Allan. Put the words in the parts of the sentences in the right order. For questions 1 – 5 choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which you think fits best according to the text.

Example:

00. of by nature you've documentary amazed polar footage ever a if been bears in,
 01. been filmed by it's him probably.

Answer:

00. If you've ever been amazed by footage of polar bears in a nature documentary,
 01. it's probably been filmed by him.

Doug Allan films wild animals in cold places. If you've ever been amazed by footage of polar bears in a nature documentary, it's probably been filmed by him. His perfect temperature, he says, is -18°C. Allan trained as a marine biologist and commercial diver. Diving was his first passion, where he learned about survival in cold places. His big break came when a TV crew turned up in Antarctica, where Allan was working, to film a wildlife documentary. "I ended up taking the crew to different places, and after 48 hours I realised that being a wildlife cameraman ticked all the boxes: travel, adventure, underwater."

1. worked wildlife now and series major he many a top has is on TV cameraman.
2. "good came a time I along at.
3. I started when

15. what next needed you used to have shots you think to,
16. you missed had and what.
17. less shot you.
18. very film expensive was.
19. have you too today can material much.”

“My value is field experience in cold conditions. I have a feel for it. I have spent so much time on sea ice it now feels like crossing the street. I do get cold toes but the poles are healthy places. There are no leeches, no diseases or mosquitoes.” Wildlife filming, Allan says, is full of great successes, but also failures and embarrassments. Once, he was in the Orkneys to film kittiwakes. Unfortunately he could not identify which birds they were.

20. when major sequences in for recently Land film Kong Karls a series to permission TV Allan got,
21. Ocean of Arctic a group the in islands,
22. expect he assignment an not did easy.
23. world off and polar but foolish fearless strictly limits most is all of is or a the it bears to.

26. watching snow the 23 day in more five days a walking and slopes for or dens hours polar after bear,
27. however, just her cub bear Allan had and seen one mother.
28. 24 day By, though, says he,
29. world in he was bear living,
30. speed at bear, senses bear with.

“We find a new hole and wait. We shuffle, hop, bend, stretch and run to stay warm. Five hours of watching and then with no warning at all I catch a glimpse so brief that I almost miss it. But the camera’s locked on the hole on full zoom and my eye’s very quickly on the viewfinder. Nothing for a couple of seconds and then an unmistakable black nose. Nose becomes muzzle, grows bigger to become full head and in less than a minute she has her front legs out and is resting on the snow in front of the hole. She’s looking at me but she’s not bothered. I’ve just taken a close-up, thinking this can’t get much better... when she sets off on a long slide down the slope. I’d swear it’s partly in sheer pleasure,” he recounts, adding that two cubs then appeared at the den entrance. “Clearly it’s their first view of the world... It’s show time on the slopes and we have front-row seats.”

Now Allan would like to make his own film about climate change in the Arctic, talking to the people who live there and experience the impact of it first hand. He says he would be able to make an extraordinary documentary.

1. What do we learn about Allan in the first paragraph?
  - A. Becoming a cameraman suited the interests he already had.
  - B. Finding work as a cameraman allowed him to remain in Antarctica.
  - C. He had to train as a diver in order to become a wildlife cameraman.
  - D. He was given the chance to work as a cameraman by a TV crew he met.

2. What does Allan say about the first documentaries he worked on?
  - A. They were shorter than those he makes nowadays.
  - B. He would have liked to have been able to choose where he worked.
  - C. He has very clear memories of them.
  - D. Most of what he filmed was new to viewers.

3. Why does Allan compare spending time on sea ice to crossing the street?
  - A. He thinks it presents a similar level of danger.
  - B. It requires skills that can be used in winter conditions anywhere.
  - C. It is an ordinary occurrence for him.
  - D. He has learnt to approach it in the same way.

4. When Allan had been on Kong Karls Land for a while, he began to
  - A. stop worrying about the dangers he was facing.
  - B. feel a deep understanding of how polar bears lived.
  - C. get used to the terrible conditions for filming.
  - D. be more hopeful that one bear would lead him to others.

5. What feeling does Allan describe in the fifth paragraph?
  - A. delight at being able to move around after waiting quietly for ages
  - B. panic when he nearly fails to film a fantastic sequence
  - C. concern that he has disturbed an adult female with her young
  - D. amazement at being lucky enough to capture some great shots

Answer:

- 00. If you've ever been amazed by footage of polar bears in a nature documentary,
- 01. it's probably been filmed by him.

In 2004, Pen Hadow became the first person to trek to the North Pole alone, without being resupplied on the way. That meant swimming through unimaginably cold waters, fighting frostbite and risking encounters with polar bears. Just eight months later, he made a similar trip to the South Pole. Now he is back in the Arctic again, preparing for an expedition he says is even more ambitious. Explorers are confident, driven individuals. They have to be. This time, however, there is far more at stake. Pen and two colleagues will set out on a three-month, 1,000-kilometre trek to the North Pole, taking detailed measurements of the thickness and density of the ice. Nobody has ever done this before, and he knows the results will be of vital importance to the scientific community. This will be the truest picture yet of what global warming is doing to the ice that covers the polar region.

Pen believes his mission reconnects exploration with the search for knowledge that drove previous generations into the unknown. “Making it to the North Pole was ultimately a personal ambition,” he admits, “and of limited value to anyone beyond the polar adventuring community. This time, scientists will profit from the data, and we’re creating a platform in which to engage as many people as possible in what’s happening in the Arctic Ocean. This is important work, and nobody can do it but us,” he says. “Our skills, which are otherwise bizarre and socially redundant, have become hyper-relevant. Suddenly, we’re socially useful again.”

1. In the first paragraph, what do we learn about Pen Hadow’s opinion of the new expedition?
  - A. He thinks it may be harder than his previous journeys.
  - B. He is looking forward to the scientific work it will involve.
  - C. He feels certain that it will be successful.
  - D. He is aware of the huge significance of its aims.

2. What does Mary Hadow think about her husband?

- A. He finds it hard to think about anything except his expeditions.
